

Nicklas B. Lundblad, Stripe
Global Head of Technology Policy

Nicklas Berild Lundblad has more than 20 years of experience in public policy and government affairs. He is currently global head of technology policy at payments services provider Stripe.

Before joining Stripe he spent 13 years with Google in different roles - including more than 5 years as vice president of public policy and government affairs responsible for Google's policy work in EMEA. Prior to Google he worked at the Stockholm Chamber of Commerce, founded and managed a small startup in the publishing business and in policy research. He holds a PhD in Informatics from Gothenburg University, an LLM from Stockholm University and a BA in Theoretical Philosophy, also from Stockholm University. He sits on a few boards, is an angel investor and a 2006 Eisenhower Fellow. He has written 3 books on technology and policy (in Swedish) and has a fourth book on the philosophy of questions coming out autumn 2021.

Nicklas Berild Lundblad currently resides in Stockholm, with his wife Emma and three children.

---