

Theo Yedinsky is Airbnb's Global Director for Policy Campaigns, based in New York, NY. In this role he is responsible to ensure the continued opportunity for sustainable growth of Airbnb in markets around the world.

After gaining his MA in Political Science from American University, Theo began working in politics and over the course of his career has served as a senior advisor to former Secretary of State John Kerry, and current California Governor Gavin Newsom, among others. Before joining Airbnb, Theo spent a decade innovating the way that political campaigns use social media—then known as “new media”—integrating these new tools into the political strategist's playbook. Theo is also an avid sports fan, a passion he briefly followed in 2012 to co-found a technology platform, Exiles Inc., that built passionate communities for sports fans who live away from their team's home city.